CHIROPRACTIC ADJUSTMENTS

The old idea that the cause of illness is outside the afflicted still prevails in most schools of healing; consequently the remedy consists in finding something which by being introduced into the body of the sufferer will drive out the disease.

The Science of Chiropractic has demenstrated that the causes of disease are displaced and sublaxated sigments of the spinal column, and by adjusting that cause the condition can be corrected to the extent that the patient will recover from whatever ailment afflicts him.

Memorial Day Procession Followed by Exercises at Chelsea Parade-Inspiring Address Made by Rev. Joseph H. Selden-Prof. J. Herbert George Decorated Soldiers' Monument.

ORRIN M. PRICE, (Sedgwick Post Commander)

Memorial day, the one day of the Memorial day, the one day of the year which the nation sets aside to pay tribute to its soldier dead, had an added significance this year. For many years the observance has been in the nature of a remembrance of the past, the paying of deserved honors of former years, but in 1917, with America plunged in the greatest war of history, this emotion was mingled with prayer for the future.

The ranks of the old Civil war veterans are fast thinning out, seven of Address by Commander Price.

The program opened with an address by Commander Orrin M. Price of Sedgwick post. Commander Price's address was as follows:

To His Honor, Allyn L. Brown, mayor of the city of Norwich, Common Council, Selectmen and other officers of the city government: As commander of Sedgwick Post and in behalf of my compades. Lagrin welcome you my comrades, I again welcome you to this, our public service. Also you the members of the Coast Artillery and Spanish War Veterans, who have for so many years done escort duty for us. this day have gathered with us to pay honor to our patriotic dead and their memorable deeds: will serve not only to make American citizenship in these days more reputable through all future generations, the Union and authority of the United States of America, comrades and friends. Hhe duty of today is of impressive significance. You have met here today to honor our dead and to deepen our reverence for their worth, to encourage a more generous charity for our comrades who are sick or in distress, and for the destitute wards of our Grand Army. Today is the festival of our dead. We unite to honor the memory of our brave and our beloved, to enrich and enoble our lives by weelling and the second our beloved.

Let us recall their tolls on the long, Let us recall their toils on the long, weary marches; their intense sufferings in the hospitals, their fearful sacrifices in the prison pens, their sublime heroism in the days of battle, and finally, as we are gathered at this monument as before an altar, may we pledge our manhood that, so help us God, the memory of our country's dead shall strengthen and encourage in us all a deeper and more abiding patriot-lism.

The Gettysburg Address.

Prayer was then offered by Rev. Joseph F. Cobb, pastor of the Universalist church, and Tubbs' band rendered a sacred selection after the prayer. The reading of the Memorial day orders by Warry Lee Goss and the reading of the obituary record by Adjutant George Kampf followed. After the Gettyshurg address by George Althe Gettysburg address by George Albert Keppler, the monument was decorated by Prof. J. Herbert George.

The Memorial Day Address.

Fifty years have passed since the or-ganization of Sedgwick post. For half a century, under the leadership of the Grand Army of the Republe, the cit-izens of Norwich have observed this day. Decoration day it was called at the first gathering. We gathered in memory of those who had faced the grim perils of the battle field and given their lives in sacrificial devotion to the sacred cause. After a time it came to be known as Memorial day, and the change of name is significant. The heroic dead were not forgotten. With no less of tenderness our sol-

Russia be the home of a free, self-governing people.

But America is at war. That is the tremendous fact we face today. I do not wonder that many hearts are burdened as they confront that heart-searching experiences of toll and sacrifice that lie before us. We are essentially a peace-loving nation. Our interests center in our private concerns and in the tasks and the problems of our own country. The traditions which have hitherto determined our foreign policy date from the memorable utterance of Washington in his Farewell Address in which he warned us of the peril of entangling alliances with European powers. From the outbreak of this war the sympathies of our people yery generally have been given to the allied nations, but, following the counsel of our president, we have faithfully sought to maintain a strict neutrality. tussis be the home of a free, selfstrict neutrality. Neutrality No Longer Possible.

Neutrality No Longer Possible.

Neutrality is no longer possible. Our rights have been ruthlessly invaded. The representatives of Germany and Austria utterly disregarding the sacred responsibilities attaching to their position, have encouraged—I fear they have directed an organized movement which sought to arouse a treacherous spirit of discord among our foreign-born citizens. By acts of incredible violence they have endeavored to cripple our industries. Their submarines have ravaged the seas, sinking our ships and sending hundreds of defenseless men, women and children to death With unexampled patience these intolerabe conditions have been borne. Unavailing profests have been repeated again and again. Two months ago the crisis, when the government of the crisis, when the government of the United States was compelled to recognize the state of war existing between this country and Germany. No other course was left. And now from Washington has issued the call sum-Rev. Joseph H. Seiden delivered the Memorial day address, which was as follows:

Washington has issued the commonly all our people to bring to this tremendous enterprise their loyal support, their whole-hearted allogiance.

How shall we measure up to the de-mands of so great a day? How shall we prepare ourselves for the successful prosecution of so great a task. President Wilson has truly said, President Wilson has truly said, the whole work in hand involves not only the training of an army and navy but also the training of a nation. The representatives of Great Britain and France have testified to the hope and courage born in the hearts of our war weary allies by the enlistment of the United States on their side. It is in our power to render an inestimable service, for the resources of the United States, both in men and money are well-nigh limitless. But before these will avail our people must be stirred by a spirit of devotion, whole-hearted and unreserved. That spirit cannot fail to take possession of our minds and hearts as we grasp more minds and hearts as we grasp more With no less of tenderness our soldiers graves were strewn with flowers. But as we gathered for this celebration our thought have centred not on their toils and sacrifices, but on their achievements: not on the cost of the war, but on the triumph won. As the years have passed the deeper meaning of the great contest has been revealed to us. We have come to understand that it was not simply a civil war, armed strife between the North and the South. The central issue was the integrity of our national life.

Webster spoke a great message on the floor of the senate he gave us the watchword, "Liberty and Union, one and inseparable." But was this a true message he spoke? Can a free people

For four decades the ablest minds in Germany have been engrossed America's Influence Profound.

The influence of America in the years that have passed since the close of the war has been profound and farreaching. These years have witnessed an astounding revolution in the political conditions of the nations beyond the seas.

A hundred years ago democracy seemed little more than a dream. The United States stood alone. Everywhere the round world over the system of autocracy was enthroned in the office of the demand then to make all their response of the numbers and prosperity of their people, and then to make all their response of the numbers and prosperity of their people, and then to make all their response of the numbers and prosperity of their people, and then to make all their response of the numbers and prosperity of their people, and then to make all their response of the numbers and prosperity of their people, and then to make all their response of Mrs. Muliel E.
